Student Leadership Institute:

- Top 10 Leadership Soft Skills
  - Flexibility
    - Flexibility on the job includes the willingness and ability to respond to changing circumstances and expectations.
    - Employers value flexible employees. Flexible employees never say, “It’s not my job” or “Do I have to?” when asked to take on a new assignment.
    - Stepping outside of your job description means getting more accomplished for the team.
    - A few examples of being flexible are listed below:
      - Working earlier or later than regularly scheduled time in order to complete a task/project or for a company event.
      - Covering another employees responsibilities while they are out sick or on leave/vacation.

- Being a good mentor for a new employee. This is not usually part of a job description.
- Knowing that most jobs have “other duties as assigned”.
- A good example of letting a potential employer know you are flexible is in the interview process. If asked what your strengths are, let the interviewer know your “soft skills”. Say “I’m flexible because I am willing to help the team get a job done regardless of whether or not it’s “my job”. This is a good example of being a “team player”.
